The Boy Who Biked the World by Alastair Humphreys is an exciting story about a young boy named Tom. Tom is always daydreaming in school. He wants to be an explorer and one day he sets off on his bike to cycle around the world. He travels through France, Turkey, The Middle East and Ethiopia before finally arriving in South Africa.

Along his journey, we read about the incredible and beautiful landscapes Tom encounters, the different traditions people have as well as the people who happily embrace him on his travels.

A great story for anyone who likes to explore new places. An excellent book for children in Years Three and Four.

Recommended by Mrs Marshall

